

Damascus condemns US statements regarding the use of "chemical weapons": False claims reflecting an aggressive approach

Syria condemned the statement issued by the US State Department a few days ago regarding an alleged chemical weapons incident eight years ago in the Damascus countryside, describing its contents as false claims.

The Syrian Foreign Ministry said in a statement today that the American press release "clearly reflects the continuation of the aggressive American approach against Syria and comes within the framework of covering up its failure in Afghanistan and its support for the terrorism that Syria is facing." The Foreign Ministry announced that it condemns "in form and substance the false claims contained in the press release issued by the US State Department on August 21," and said that the latter "attempted through it to distort the facts and spread its misleading and false ideas regarding the alleged use of chemical weapons eight years ago in Eastern Ghouta in the Damascus countryside in 2013."

The SANA news agency quoted the source as saying that the United States of America "tried to invest in its lies and false claims to launch false accusations against Syria, while the party that issued this statement is fully aware that Syria does not possess these weapons at all and has fulfilled all its obligations under its accession to the Chemical Weapons Convention in 2013."

The source said, "It is natural for the United States of America to defend its agents and tools on Syrian soil from terrorist groups and killers who have shed Syrian blood and committed crimes against our proud people in order to justify American and Western intervention and aggression against Syria." The Syrian Foreign Ministry added that the US policy of supporting terrorism and imposing all forms of inhumane and immoral unilateral coercive sanctions is what deserves condemnation, punishment, and accountability.

The source concluded by emphasizing that Syria is "against the use of this type of weapon anywhere, at any time, under any circumstances, and by any party, because it is contrary to its moral principles and categorically contradicts the undeniable fact that it has fulfilled all its obligations as a result of joining the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons." The US State Department issued a statement on the eighth anniversary of the alleged chemical attack in Eastern Ghouta, Damascus, calling for the Syrian government to be punished for "the multiple atrocities it has committed against its people," according to the statement.

The ministry expressed "the United States' condemnation in the strongest possible terms of the use of chemical weapons by any party and under any circumstances, and its determination to ensure that those who use these weapons do not escape punishment.